About Maputo

Born in Accra, Ghana, Maputo Mensah grew up in a family of drummers and dancers. He began performing in a family group at the age of five. His first professional performance was at the age of 10 with the West African Folkloric Troupe. Maputo learned the traditional songs, dances, and drumming by watching the Ghana Dance Ensemble as well as participating and watching drumming and dancing in Ghana at events and festivals. Maputo combines a love of Ghanaian culture with a passion for sharing joy with people around the world.

Maputo has dedicated his life since the age of five to mastering West African dance's art, skill, and tradition. Since 1990, he has used this mastery to bring joy to people of all backgrounds, teaching enjoyment of life and respect for others through West African tradition.

Following his early childhood experiences, Maputo studied classical African dance and drumming for 14 years at the Academy of African Music and Arts in Kokrobite, Ghana, under master drummer and dancer Mustapha Tettey Addy, who spent his life gathering traditional rhythms and dances from all over West Africa to preserve them for posterity, and who has sent traditional African musicians all over the world to spread the ancient wisdom within these art forms. Besides traveling the U.S. teaching African traditions, Maputo has toured with Peter Gabriel's WOMAD Festival, the Royal Obonu Drummers, Chuck Davis, collaborated with Pharaoh Sanders, and given workshops and performances in Germany and London. Maputo's apprenticeship under Mustapha Tettey Addy and the other master dancers and drummers at AAMA gave him an undergraduate degree and a very rich educational foundation from which to develop his curriculum in traditional West African dance and culture.

Since moving to the U.S. in 1999, Maputo has led workshops at the University of Alaska, the University of Oregon, Washington State University, Dartmouth College, Duke University, and Northern Arizona State University. In addition to the community dance and drumming classes he offers weekly in Boulder and Lafayette, Colorado, Maputo has taught his curriculum at Naropa University from 2000 to 2015, at the Libby Residential Academic Program at the University of Colorado Boulder from 2005 to the present, and at the University of Denver starting in 2015. He served as Assistant Director of the CU West African Highlife Ensemble under the direction of Dr. Kwasi Ampene from 2006-2010 and became Executive Director in 2010. CUWAHE performs Highlife and traditional music from Ghana, Togo, Congo, Ivory Coast, and Nigeria, Africa. In addition, Maputo is currently the Executive Director of the Logo Ligi dance ensemble, a professional dance company in Boulder, Colorado.

In 2023, Maputo opened the Akpe Cultural Center in Kokrobite, Ghana, dedicated to teaching and preserving the traditional performing arts of Africa. The center serves local children at no cost and welcomes visitors, students, artists, and art lovers from around the world.
