Teaching Experience

Senior Lecturer, Leeds School of Business and the Presidents Leadership Class

University of Colorado at Boulder

2001-Present

Prepare and teach courses in leadership skills and strategic management.

Executive Leadership (MBAX 6561). Developed the curriculum, syllabus and taught the first class of this new course for mid-career MBA students. This course is about executive leaders and leadership in a dynamic 21st century world. It is designed to help working professionals hone their leadership skills and enhance their readiness for more senior positions in their professional fields. The course covers managing both up and down including working with a board of directors.

Becoming a Leader (LEAD 1000). Developed the curriculum, syllabus and taught the first class of this foundational course required for students pursuing the university's new campus-wide leadership minor. The course begins preparing students to exercise leadership in business, government, and non-profit organizations including community and civic activity settings. It also helps students to improve their self-awareness, understand multiple leadership theories, build analytic and critical thinking skills, understand the importance of moral courage, and adapt their leadership practices to differences among individuals.

Critical Leadership Skills (MGMT 3030). This course helps students think broadly about leadership and begin preparing themselves for leadership positions in business, government, and non-profit organizations. The focus is on improving personal leadership skills including: understanding the nature of leadership, recognizing your strengths and weaknesses, developing your leadership philosophy, and speaking and writing clearly and effectively. The course throughout emphasizes the importance of leading and managing consistent with the highest ethical principles and values.

Strategic Management (MGMT 4000). This capstone course about crafting and implementing strategy requires students to integrate and apply much of what they have learned in earlier, more specific functional courses. Students must deal with many dynamic variables and situational factors at once and develop and implement strategies under the press of deadlines. By combining theory with practical exercises, and learning from experience what works and what doesn't, the course provides useful guidelines for students who want to be strategic leaders of the future.

Global Issues in Leadership (PRLC 3810). This course is required for students enrolled in the Presidents Leadership Class (PLC), a rigorous academic and experiential four-year leadership development program for top students from all majors at the University of Colorado at Boulder. Students who complete the requirements are eligible for the University's Leadership Certificate. This course examines the leadership challenges posed by seven major global issues: population, energy, security, investment, illegal drugs, disease, and terrorism. Each topic is explored through team teaching, expert guest lectures and challenging case studies with a special emphasis on the development of effective, long-term leadership strategies.

CU Business Intensive Certificate (CUBIC). This three-week noncredit, certification program teaches fundamental business skills to non-business majors. Business topics include accounting, finance, economics, marketing, leadership and management, and personal finance. The learning experience is enhanced through an entrepreneurial, integrated team project that provides real-world applicability to the curriculum. Upon successful completion of the program, participants are awarded a Certificate in Applied Business.
