CURRENT POSITIONS

Program Director – May 2023 to present

University of Colorado Environment and Natural Sciences Residential Academic Program (ENS RAP), Boulder, CO

After an extensive reorganization of the College of Arts & Sciences Residential Academic Programs in 2023, work with the other RAP Program Directors, Program Coordinators, the Executive Director, the A&S Associate Dean, student leaders, custodial staff members, Hall Directors, and RAs to guide the RAPs into a new more effective and sustainable system that provides a high level of academic support to faculty and first year students, creates a strong sense of community in the residence halls, and advocates for the visibility and positive reputation of the RAPs in cognate departments and across the CU Boulder campus.

Associate Teaching Professor (Senior Instructor) – May 2011 to present (promoted to Senior Instructor May 2017)

University of Colorado Global Studies Residential Academic Program (G-RAP) and ENS RAP, Boulder, CO

→ Previous appointments: Sustainability and Social Innovation Residential Academic Program (SSI RAP), Sewall Residential Academic Program (Sewall RAP), Honors Residential Academic Program (Honors RAP), and the International Affairs Program (IAFS)

Teach six-seven seminars per year; organize guest speakers, film series, and co-curricular events; mentor students; attend and present pedagogy workshops; serve on university committees and as faculty advisor for student groups; collaborate with local community organizations; give public and classroom talks; attend and present at professional conferences; publish on pedagogy.

- Exploring a Non-Western Culture Area: The Andes (ANTH 1155): Created new course to analyze how the history of indigenous cultural traditions, Spanish colonialism, Western imperialism, and social movements in the Andes region—Chile, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, and Colombia—has given rise to current political, economic, environmental, and social issues.
- Culture and Power: Democracy (ANTH 1200): Designed this course to examine meanings and practices of democracy in the U.S. and around the world, with a focus on current events, cultural and historical contexts, the state-market-civil society relationship, and forms of expression, participation, citizenship, and problem-solving.
- Culture and Power: Drug Policy (ANTH 1200): Designed this course to examine 1) ancient traditions of psychoactive drug use, 2) the onset of prohibition policies and their racialized justifications, 3) modern paradigms of drug use and abuse, and 4) efforts to reduce the harms associated with addiction and prohibitionist policies.
- America: An Anthropological Perspective (ANTH 3170): Designed this course to consider a selection of historical and contemporary aspects of American life from an anthropological perspective, focusing on key moments in our history that help explain some of today’s most pressing social, political, and economic realities.
- Teaching Anthropology (ANTH 4910): Adapted this course to allow upper-division undergraduate students to serve as Teaching Assistants in my classes, to benefit both their professional development and first-year students by their creating in-class activities, assisting with event coordination, practicing peer mentorship, and running exam review sessions.

- Globalization (IAFS 1000): Created new course to ground the central themes of globalization—colonialism, capitalism, neoliberalism, development, democracy, debt, civil society, U.S. foreign policy, migration, drug war, climate change, commodity chains, and fair trade—in multidisciplinary and applied perspectives focused on current events.
- Global and Local Community Engagement in International Affairs (IAFS 3000): Designed this new course to allow International Affairs majors to fulfill the Off-Campus Experience requirement, gaining an international perspective while engaging from home (especially during a pandemic), with a Community Engagement Project as participant observation.
- Sustainability, Democracy, and Community Engagement (IAFS 3000): Designed this new course to allow upper-division students from any major the opportunity to analyze complex theories and practical realities of the meanings and practices of democracy and sustainability, with a Community Engagement Project as participant observation and Solutionary Pedagogy.
- International Affairs Independent Study (IAFS 4900): Peer Mentors receive expert mentorship in professional development and pedagogical skills applicable to many career paths; design activities to help students connect theoretical concepts to real world issues; ensure that each student gains an international perspective even while learning from home.
- Community Engagement (GSAP 1500): Created new one-credit course for G-RAP students to volunteer on- and off-campus with guidance; maintain a field journal; analyze the practical meanings of community, civil society, diversity, leadership, and citizenship; and organize a public forum to present their experiences and findings.
- Sustainability, Social Innovation, and Entrepreneurship (SSIR 1010): Originally as a member of an instructor team, designed this course to study human behavior during the “Anthropocene,” review critical social and environmental problems, and analyze how individuals and collectives via the state, market, and civil society innovate solutions toward sustainability.

Bali Sustainability Global Seminar Program Director – Summer 2024

University of Colorado Environmental Studies Department (ENVS) and the Education Abroad Program, Boulder, CO

Designed a 21-day international experiential education offering with a focus on sustainability, social innovation, and entrepreneurship in collaboration with the Bali Institute, a local organization with community contacts around the island. Responsible for recruiting students, reviewing applications, interviewing applicants, developing pre-departure seminars, facilitating student engagement in-country with local guides and community partners, delivering course content, managing all paperwork and finances, mentoring student ethnographic research projects, and evaluating student performance.

- Sustainability, Social Innovation, and Entrepreneurship in Bali (ENVS 3100): Created new Study Abroad summer course with a focus on the histories, concepts, and crises of sustainability in the specific cultural context of the island of Bali in Indonesia. Through interdisciplinary readings and in-person visits, students learn how a range of government, business, and civil society actors devise innovative ways to address persistent social, economic, and environmental challenges.

OTHER UNIVERSITY TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Bolivia Global Seminar Program Director – Summer 2012 to 2019 (five groups of 10 students each)

University of Colorado Anthropology Department and the Education Abroad Program, Boulder, CO

Designed this unique short-term international experiential education offering, including the syllabus, itinerary, and budget. Responsible for recruiting students, reviewing applications, interviewing applicants, developing pre-departure seminars, setting up all logistics, speakers, and activities in Bolivia, running the program in-country with local assistants and community partners, managing all paperwork and finances, mentoring student ethnographic engagement, and evaluating student performance.

- Democracy and Development in Bolivia (ANTH 4020): Created new Study Abroad summer course with a focus on how the history and (agri)culture of the Yungas region—notably Aymara and Afrobolivian traditions, coffee, coca leaf, and tourism—influence practices of community democracy and sustainable development, with pre-departure classes and three weeks in Bolivia for experiential outings and practice in ethnographic methods and analysis.
- Global Inquiry Bolivia (IAFS 3000): With a U.S. State Department 100,000 Strong in the Americas Innovation Fund Grant, created new course to facilitate an applied practicum for students to deepen their immersion experience following the Global Seminar. Students select a rural field research or urban service learning project, and work in collaboration with Bolivian college students. Topics include economic development, public health, education policy, and ecotourism. (2015 only)

Anthropology Lecturer – Spring 2011

University of Colorado Honors Program, Global Studies RAP, and Anthropology Department, Boulder, CO

- Culture and Power: Democracy (ANTH 1200, 2 sections): Created new course to investigate meanings and practices of democracy around the world; topics included immigration, labor unions, the global economy, the “war on drugs,” foreign policy, and protests and popular uprisings (with a focus on the unfolding events in Tunisia, Egypt, and the Arab World).
- Democracy in South America (ANTH 4020): This upper-division interdisciplinary course analyzed the New Left turn in South America and the cultural-historical context of indigenous civil society, economic policy, social movements, and foreign relations, with films, guest speakers, and an independent research project and paper.

Anthropology Lecturer – Fall 2010

University Centers of the San Miguel (in conjunction with Colorado Mesa University), Telluride, CO

- Immigration in the United States Southwest (ANTH 296): Created new course to examine current political conflicts; the anthropology of migration; the culture history of the Southwest; NAFTA, the drug war, and other push-pull factors influencing immigration from Mexico and Latin America; border crossings and security; the agricultural, industrial, and tourism economies; human rights; reform initiatives; and Latinx social movements.

Anthropology Visiting Lecturer – 2008-09 academic year

University of Denver Anthropology Department, Denver, CO

- The Scope and Scale of Anthropology (ANTH 2010): Created new theory seminar to illustrate the infinite variety of ways that sociocultural phenomena—e.g., class, power, gender, ethnicity, history—and contextual levels—individual, family, community, civil society, state, global networks—can be combined in research.
- Social Change in Latin America (ANTH 2400): Created new seminar to explore the current rise of the New Left in Latin America by studying social movements, the drug war, environmental issues, globalization, immigration, and revolution in Bolivia, Cuba, Guatemala, Brazil, Mexico, Ecuador, Chile and Venezuela.
- Applied Anthropology (ANTH 3470): Created an innovative approach to the study of applied, or public, anthropology by mentoring students in independent study projects related to their Master’s thesis topics.
- Democracy in the United States (FSEM 1111): Created new interdisciplinary first-year seminar to study the principles, traditions, and current issues of democracy in the U.S.—including education, labor unions, media, immigration, environmental justice, and social movements—and to follow the historic 2008 presidential election.
- Anthropology: Global Perspectives (SOCS 1010): Created new course to explore anthropology’s four main subfields, plus public anthropology. Mentored three M.A. teaching assistants in pedagogy and learning styles.

Anthropology Lecturer – Spring 2008

University of Colorado Anthropology Department, Boulder, CO

- Ethnography of Mexico (ANTH 3110): Developed a six-week course to explore the roots and present manifestations of the Spanish Conquest and indigenous community traditions in Mexico.

- Anthropology of Fishing (ANTH 4570): Created new six-week course to study subsistence fishing cultures in the Pacific Northwest and Alaska, current issues in Native fishing rights and fisheries conservation, and the cultural history and sport of fly fishing worldwide.

University of Colorado Anthropology Department, Boulder, CO

- Democracy in South America (ANTH 4020): Created new seminar to examine meanings and practices of democracy, the New Left, U.S. foreign policy, political economy, and development. Evaluated case studies from Bolivia, Chile, Colombia, Venezuela, and Brazil in context of the cold war, neoliberal reform, and the drug war.
- Globalization and Anthropology (ANTH 4020): Created new seminar on the history of globalization, focusing on the local-global dynamics of capitalism, liberal democracy, indigenous knowledge, development, collective activism, migration, refugees, language, nationalism, perspectives on the U.S., and research methodology.
- Frontiers of Cultural Anthropology (ANTH 2010): Developed introductory course on cultural anthropology theory that emphasized historical trajectories, political economic context, and area studies; incorporated an independent study assignment to allow students to explore their ethnographic and topical interests.

Anthropology Teaching Assistant – Fall 1999 to Fall 2002

University of Colorado Anthropology Department, Boulder, CO

Designed and led weekly recitations with experiential activities, lectures, discussion, review sessions, and films; responsible for all grading of essays and exams; mentored students on course material and as an informal advisor.

- Frontiers of Cultural Anthropology (Fall 2001 and Fall 2002 – sole TA for 100 students)
- Exploring a Non-Western Culture: The Tamil (Spring 2001)

RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Ethnographic Fieldwork in Bolivia – July 2003 to December 2004; June 2006

University of Colorado, Boulder, CO [Support from a Fulbright Full Grant and an NSEP David L. Boren Fellowship]

Conducted participant observation fieldwork and structured interviews in the Coroico municipality and La Paz. Supported four thesis students from the Unidad Académica Campesina-Carmen Pampa with research assistantships. Completed advanced Spanish and introductory Aymara courses and background research in Cochabamba.

Predissertation Research in Washington, DC – June 2002

University of Colorado, Boulder, CO [Support from a Developing Areas Research and Teaching (DART) Fellowship]

Interviewed economists, government officials, development specialists, independent scholars, and social justice activists in Washington, DC—several of them Bolivian—to ascertain "the view of Bolivia from Washington" as a hub for research in Latin America, policy making, and program generation.

Predissertation Fieldwork in Bolivia – Summer 2001

University of Colorado, Boulder, CO [Support from an Anthropology Department Grant and a Beverly Sears Grant]

As the pilot study for my dissertation fieldwork in Bolivia, interviewed members of Nor Yungas communities, government departments, development banks, U.S. government agencies, and local, national, and international organizations; conducted archival research; generated approval for my dissertation research.

Research Assistant – 1998-99 academic year

University of Colorado Conflict Research Consortium, Boulder, CO

Developed a plan to study socio-environmental issues in Colorado as part of a research team; examined the eastern El Paso County zoning controversy, interviewed residents and all five county commissioners, and attended planning meetings; contributed my findings to a book chapter (see Gardner et al. 2002 under Publications).

Interviewer/Research Assistant – Spring 1996

University of Michigan Center for Human Growth and Development, Ann Arbor, MI

Conducted 30 one-hour telephone interviews, assisted in preparation of materials, and coded completed interviews in a group project to study differences in opinion between men, women, Blacks, and whites on topics comparing hereditary and environmental influences on society.

PROGRAM ADMINISTRATION

Volunteer Team Leader – 1994 to present

Global Volunteers, St. Paul, MN (<https://globalvolunteers.org/>)

Lead groups of adults on short-term service learning programs: facilitate cultural orientation and team goal sessions; organize work projects with local community members; manage meetings, group dynamics, and program budget; write reports; build relationships with other nations to promote peace and justice. Participated in four week-long applied team leader training programs. Served in Poland, Cuba (x3), Ireland, Tanzania (x2), Jamaica (x2), Ecuador, Italy, Minnesota, Texas, and Costa Rica.

- Poland (July-August 2022): Led two teams to work with Ukrainian refugee families in rural villages in the Siedlce province of eastern Poland, with a summer camp for the children (English lessons, art projects, team building, and a field trip to Warsaw), and outings with the mothers, grandmothers, and children, including a night of bowling, a pizza party, and picking cherries. Worked closely with our Ukrainian program coordinator, and five young adult Ukrainian and Polish translators.

Faculty-in-Residence – August 2013 to July 2017

University of Colorado Global Studies Residential Academic Program (G-RAP), and Sustainability and Social Innovation Residential Academic Program (SSI RAP), Boulder, CO

Lived—with my husband and daughter and pets—in a private apartment in the Arnett (2013-14) and Williams Village North (2014-17) residence halls on the CU Boulder campus; hosted faculty and student meetings and gatherings; advised graduate student TAs and undergraduate student leaders; held evening and weekend office hours; coordinated student support with Residence Life; promoted, organized, and attended RAP events.

Associate Director – May 2011 to May 2015

University of Colorado Global Studies Residential Academic Program (G-RAP), Boulder, CO

Assisted with program administration, reporting to RAP director; served on university committees and as faculty advisor for student groups; and helped our upper-division Peer Mentors develop academic mentorship, volunteer service, and event planning skills by directing an annual training day, weekly meetings, regular support, and a unique one-credit course.

- Community Engagement for G-RAP Peer Mentors (GSAP 1500): Designed this one-credit course for our Fellows and Resident Assistants in Arnett Hall, an outcome-based course grounded in community engagement and the spirit of professional development with the goal of cultivating effective leadership skills in peer mentors and the students they serve.

Lead Coordinator – January 2005 to May 2006; September 2007 to June 2008

University of Colorado Graduate Teacher Program, Boulder, CO (<https://www.colorado.edu/center/teaching-learning/>)

Co-managed 55 Lead Graduate Teachers in this award-winning program that supports graduate student teachers in 48 academic departments: interview incoming Leads; help direct intensive professional training week; plan and run meetings; carry out daily management duties; support teacher training across disciplines; administer reports, surveys and timesheets; conduct exit interviews; revise and edit lead manual; organize semester workshop series; help facilitate university conferences; provide private videotape consultations; guide University Teaching Certificate procedure; create and present pedagogy workshops.
