Institution Building

Founding Faculty, Department of Information Science, University of Colorado Boulder

As one of eight founding faculty of CU Boulder's Department of Information Science, I contributed significantly to standing up the new department in the new College of Media, Communication and Information. I co-designed the programs of study for the B.S. in Information Science, the minor in Information Science, and the Ph.D. in Information Science (2015–2016). I also served as the first associate chair of undergraduate studies (2016) and as the first associate chair of graduate studies (2016–2017).

Co-Designer, Human-Centered Computing Ph.D., College of Computing, Georgia Institute of Technology

As a graduate student, I was a member of the committee that designed and launched Georgia Tech's Ph.D. program in Human-Centered Computing (2002–2003). I also served on the first admissions committee (2005), designed (and eventually taught) the program's first interdisciplinary theory course (2006), and was the first student enrolled in the program.

RESEARCH

Archival Conference Proceedings with Presentations

In Human-Computer Interaction, as within Computer Science more generally, the top (journal-equivalent) publications appear in archival conference proceedings, such as the Association for Computing Machinery's (ACM) CHI or CSCW proceedings. These are rigorously peer-reviewed venues with low acceptance rates (e.g., CHI's acceptance rate ranges from 20-25%; CSCW's acceptance rate has historically ranged from 15-25%, though CSCW has recently begun a transition to a journal model with a multi-stage revision process that has supported higher-quality scholarship and higher acceptance rates). Annual acceptance rates for each venue are noted inline.

Further, while I define the larger research agenda and provide extensive mentoring in the research and writing process, I encourage my students and postdoctoral researchers to be the first authors on our collaborative papers to prepare them for independent research. It is typical, in these instances, for the primary faculty mentor to be listed as the last, anchor author on mentored publications (and additional faculty mentors to be listed following student co-authors). In the lists that follow, student co-authors on publications are noted with an asterisk (*) and postdoctoral co-authors are noted with a dagger (†).

Starting in 2018, top-tier ACM conferences started to transition their publication models from conference proceedings to journals. For CSCW publications from 2018 forward, please see the journal section of this vita.
